Kennworth Eaton is here, close to this place, at sea. He was strong and healthy and enjoyed the life he shared with his loved ones and friends. His love of flying brought him here, to this place. He died doing what he loved doing the best.

Let's remember Kenn Eaton and the memories of the excitement, the love and the joy he carried and shared.

Let's remember Kenn Eaton and let's bless his survivors. He would want it that way.

"Nada" in another language means "Hope". We found both today. We send this message from his family and loved ones today, with sure and certain hope that the sea will give up its dead.
